Auto Accident Sat. Night.

Another car accident took place late Saturday night on the Highway, one mile east of the Stony Curve. Car No. 47312, driven by Mr. Joseph Johnson of Edmonton, proceeding west, rammed a car carrying a Saskatchewan number plate which was being operated by Mr. Thorncliff. The impact broke the left front wheels of both machines, besides doing other damage. Both cars were hauled in to Sommerfield & Mayer's car hospital in Stony Plain, where they have undergone repair.

On being notified, Constable Bone was promptly on the scene. He proceeded to put the driver of the Edmonton car under arrest.

In Magistrate E. Williams's court Monday afternoon Mr. Johnson was charged that he did, on about the 28th day of July, 1932, operate a motor vehicle upon the public highway whilst in an intoxicated condition, contrary to Sec. 365 Criminal Code of Canada. Accused was sentenced to seven days imprisonment at hard labor in the Provincial Jail at Fort Saskatchewan.

Immense Value To Canada Of Her Wild Life Resources Stressed By Minister Of Interior

The tremendous value to Canada of her resources in wild life was stressed by Hon. Thomas G. Murphy, Minister of the Interior, in his opening address at the Provincial-Dominion Game Conference which was held recently in Ottawa. He stated that the Dominion's annual income from wild life had been estimated at $53,000,000, and that to many people, especially the Indians and Eskimos, the wild life was their only means of livelihood.

Mr. Murphy, under whose Department the administration of the Migratory Birds Convention Act comes, prefaced his remarks with an outline of the important work before the Conference. He drew attention to the fact that the Act applied to insectivorous birds, which are among man's greatest friends, as well as to game birds, a point of great importance. The habits of these deserved study, as well as those of game birds, to secure information to guide those administering the Act. Pioneer plainsmen could not believe that the buffalo would in such a short time become practically extinct in their wild state, nor could residents of Canada and the United States conceive that the wood pigeon, which once flocked in countless numbers, would completely vanish from the earth.

Reports received at Ottawa in the past year showed that this was a time of crisis in regard to waterfowl. The drying up of the marsh areas in Southern Manitoba and Saskatchewan and in northern Alberta, which were the breeding grounds of the wild duck, had seriously decreased the supply of ducks over the greater part of Canada and the United States. This situation suggested the need of regulation and control, if ducks were not to disappear like the wood pigeon.

No better plan to protect birds had been devised than that of bird sanctuaries. In addition to the many sanctuaries scattered through the settled parts of the provinces, especially the Prairie Provinces, large areas in the Northwest Territories had been set aside as reserves in which natives only could hunt, and Quebec had virtually reserved all that portion of the province north of the transcontinental railway line for the use of Indians. Altogether in Canada 560,000 square miles of country had been so set aside.

Mr. Murphy gave a few personal observations as a duck hunter. The comradeship of sportsmen was, he said, a wonderful thing. One sportsman, seeing for an hour how another, a stranger, met the birds as they came on, felt he needed no formal introduction, because he realized by the other's actions that they both had the same point of view, the same idea of fair play, and of keeping in mind the future, and the pleasure of those who might come after.

This led Mr. Murphy to discuss the question of law enforcement. The best way, in his view, was to pass on the information as to the need of conservation—to get the public with them. As soon as sportsmen saw the need they would not only carry out the regulations, they would set up an even higher standard of their own, and they would frown down any violations of the Act on the part of others.

The problems of administration were not all the same in all parts of Canada. The object was to secure co-operation. Those present he believed, were men who would not only look at things from the administrator's standpoint but also from that of the sportsman in field. That being so he believed this Conference would be an unqualified success and would devise regulations which would further conserve wild life not only for the present time but also for future generations.

Wins Cowboy Championship

Alberta Horseman Awarded Honors At Calgary Stampede

Excelling in all the arts of horsemanship, steer riding, roping and other performances for which he was chosen, Herman Linder, of Cardston, Alberta, was awarded the North American all-round cowboy championship, at the Calgary stampede. The title previously was held by Eddie Woods, of Emmett, Idaho.

Linder also captured the Canadian all-round championship and the similar provincial honor, both of which he held last year.

The North American bucking horse riding championship was won by Pete Knight, of Crossfield, Alberta, with his youthful namesake, Harry Knight, of Banff, taking the championship with Sallie.

A new recognized world record for calf roping (loose rope), was set by Bob Vrossie, of Enns, New Mexico, who roped, downed and tied his calf in 13 and 4-5 seconds, compared with the previous record of 15 and 2-5 seconds.

"Smoky" Snider, of Kimberley, B.C., won the Canadian championship bareback bucking contest.

More than 174,676 people visited the stampede during the week.

Mystery Station A Puzzle

New Zealanders Get Program From Some Unknown Station

Radio fans in New Zealand have been much puzzled by a mysterious broadcasting every night, and radio officials in the country have been unable to locate its source. The announcer always prefaces his remarks with "Arlo, arlo," and at times it sounds like "Hilo, hilo," but it is undoubtedly the equivalent for "Hello, hello." Some nights he gives an English-American program, and on these nights he announces in what is presumed to be Ammanese, English and French, but his remarks in English are hard to follow owing to the foreign accent. When he commences his announcing in English after speaking in Ammanese, he undoubtedly says "Hello, hello," but with a foreign accent. Some authorities believe it may be from the powerful station at Saigon, French Indo-China.

Canada's Wood-Pulp Production

Of all the wood-pulp produced in Canada in 1930, according to the figures lately issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, in co-operation with the Forest Service, Department of the Interior, somewhat over 93 per cent. was composed of two species, namely, spruce and balsam fir, or balsam. The remainder was made up of hemlock, jack pine, and poplar, with a few less important kinds.

Message From the Sea

Tells Of Plight Of Seaman Off Coast Of Africa, More Than 34 Years Ago

A message from the sea, purporting to tell of the plight of a seaman off the coast of Africa more than 34 years ago, was picked up recently by Austin Carby on the shore of White's Cove, Digby Neck, N. S.

It was pencilled on a piece of ruled paper, yellowed with age, and contained in the traditional bottle.

"January 17, 1898—somewhere off the coast of Africa—Have just sighted land after 33 days and 40 nights.

"I have one loaf of bread and one pint of water. My strength is going fast and I don't think I will reach land.—Oscar Lawrence, A.B."

Assists British Subjects

British Columbia Woman Gives Useful Service In Los Angeles

Down in Los Angeles, where some British subjects are having a tough time fighting the depression and the aftermath of the real estate boom, a Canadian is doing valuable work in making their situation easier. She is Mrs. Elsie MacCleave, formerly Miss Elsie Craig of Penticton, B.C.

This energetic Canadian woman is head of the British Benevolent Association which undertakes to straighten out many of the worries of stranded Britons.

This organization is a community chest agency in which the relief work of the Daughters of the British Empire and the British War Veterans is consolidated. They are looking after British war veterans, straightening out pension complications, coaxing overseas relatives to see their duty and do it by these expatriates of theirs; looking after a variety of claims; attending to Britons who have violated immigration laws, and persuading His Majesty's government to pay their way home, and countless other embarrassments that beset so many of the 100,000 British in Southern California.

Mrs. MacCleave was born in the Klondike, schooled in Berlin, speaks German like a native, and was there for detailed for prison war camp work in England during the war. Serving with the British Consulate in Los Angeles during the Hon. Godfrey Fisher's seven years, she knows that city well. With the help of a few volunteers she takes care of all family cases.

Snapsots and Grasshoppers

Said To Multiply and Thrive During Years Of Sunspot Minimums

Numbers of grasshoppers fluctuate with the eleven-year sunspot cycle. They are most numerous at sunspot minimum according to investigations carried out at the Dominion Observatory, Department of the Interior, Ottawa. A record of grasshopper numbers in Manitoba, 1895-1929, published by an official of the Entomological Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, shows a close relationship to the sunspot cycle. A sunspot minimum is approaching rapidly, and grasshoppers are expected to be very numerous in the Prairie Province this year and in 1933. South Africa is suffering from a plague of locusts at the present time.

Rubber Factory In Turkey

Sweden is building the first rubber factory in Turkey, located in Istanbul. The new enterprise is organized by Goeta Glasow, head of the Swedish rubber plant at Glavved, in connection with the Swedish Co-Operative Association. It will be led by Goeta Korner, a Swedish engineer, although all workmen will be Turks.

Brazil will extend three of its government railway lines.

High railway rates are driving business to buses in Albania.

With the net new capital cost to Canada envisaged at less than $10,000,000, the St. Lawrence waterway treaty was signed at Washington. Work will spread over a seven-year period from early next year to 1940.

The net new capital expenditure by the Dominion is estimated at $38,071,000, but this figure may be decreased by $4,233,000 if the necessity for a guard lock in the Beauharnois canal is eliminated.

The net outlay of $33,000,000 is the total payment Canada will have to make after being paid an approximate amount of $67,000,000 by Ontario and allowed $128,000,000 by the United States for the new Welland ship canal and other works.

Canada has won her contention for a two-stage development. The treaty, which deals with the international section of the St. Lawrence, discloses that dams will be located at Cryslar and Barnhart Islands. A 27-foot channel is to be built to allow ocean vessels to proceed to the head of the Great Lakes.

A "St. Lawrence international rapids section commission," composed of five Canadians and five Americans, will construct the works in the international rapids section. Power-house superstructures, machinery and equipment required for the development of power such as Ontario proposes to build, will be outside the authority of the commission.

In the generation of 1,100,000 horse power which it will obtain in the international section, Ontario will spend $15,306,000 at the Cryslar Island plant and $21,625,000 at Barnhart Island.

Canadian engineers, Canadian workmen and Canadian material alone will be employed in respect to the river works lying on the Canadian side of the international boundary. Upon completion, all river works on the Canadian side of the international boundary will be owned, maintained and controlled by Canada.

Total net cost to the United States will be $24,561,000. This amount is made up of $65,100,000 for channel deepening and other necessary works in the upper lakes section and $175,561,000 in the international rapids section.

Work Of Stone Age Artist

Five Statuettes Found In Russia Are Very Old

Five mammoth-bone statuettes, believed to be 25,000 years old, have been discovered in a paleolithic encampment at Gagarino, in the Tambov Province, Central Russia.

Archaeologists say that there can be no doubt that the statuettes were made by a Stone Age artist, when Southwestern Europe was inhabited by the Cro-Magnon race, at least 25,000 years ago. Ancient stone instruments, fragments of mammoth bone, and bones of other animals of the post-glacial period have been found on the same site.

A Chinese wedding gown worn 125 years ago was shown at Oshkosh, Wisconsin, by Clara Lem, fifteen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Lem, who came to the United States from China in 1910. The gown first was worn by Clara's great-grandmother and handed down through five generations.

IRISH FREE STATE WILLING TO BUY OUR PRODUCTS

Ottawa, Ont.—The Irish Free State offers a wide market for Canadian flour and bacon, and in return for reciprocal advantages in the Canadian market for certain commodities the delegates of that country would be prepared to grant this Dominion substantial preferences. Representations along these lines will, it is understood, form the case of the Free State at the present Imperial Conference.

At the moment Canada enjoys a considerable market in the Irish Free State for bacon, it was declared here by individuals close to the Free State delegation. They cited that in the first three months of the current calendar year imports of bacon from Canada had increased 25 times over those for the corresponding period last year. While it was true the Free State itself was an exporter of bacon, it was equally true Ireland was a heavy importer of cheaper brands. In supplying that demand Canada would be offered considerable advantages, it was understood, under certain conditions.

Another element in connection with the Free State delegation was free to bargain was wheat. Provided that Canada would extend reciprocal preferences, the Free State, it is understood here, was prepared to give substantial concessions to Canadian wheat.

On the other side of the scale are the reciprocal benefits which the Free State will ask for its woollens, its liquors and malt beverages.

Dictatorship For Prussia

Martial Law Has Been Declared In Berlin

Berlin, Germany.—The federal government set up a dictatorship over the entire state of Prussia, declaring martial law in Berlin and the province of Brandenburg and sweeping out of office every member of the Prussian state cabinet.

This drastic action precipitated the worst constitutional conflict since the founding of the Reich in 1871.

The Prussian authorities, declaring the dictatorship to be contrary to law, refused to yield to the demands of the federal government except by force. In many cases force was used.

Berlin was under heavy guard to-night, and machine guns were mounted in the court in front of the federal chancellery. Every precaution was being taken to prevent disorders.

Under an emergency decree issued by President Paul von Hindenburg, Chancellor Franz von Papen became federal commissioner administering the state of Prussia. He named Lord Mayor Franz Bracht of Essen as deputy commissioner. One of Bracht's first acts was to attempt to take over the state ministry of interior, and he encountered plenty of trouble.

That ministry has for years been under Dr. Karl Severing, sworn foe of the present federal regime and of its move to sweep away the state government. When Severing refused to hand over the ministry a police captain threatened to drag Dr. Severing out. So Dr. Severing yielded his post. He was not arrested.

Holland Needs Canadian Wheat

Montreal, Que.—Holland needs Canadian wheat for its quality, which other countries cannot match, declared I. Van Denbergh, grain merchant of The Hague, in an interview here. The Dutch wheat crop this year is estimated at 300,000 tons, he said. The country's consumption is double this figure. Some of this balance will come from Canada, he said.

Irish Issue Sheds

Ottawa, Ont.—The differences between Great Britain and the Irish Free State will not be projected into the deliberations of the Imperial Conference. This was made clear by Rt. Hon. J. H. Thomas, Dominion's secretary in the British government, and also by Sean T. O'Kelly, vice-president of the Free State executive council.

U.S. Losing British Trade

Through New Tariffs and Suspension Of Gold Standard

London, England.—The United States has lost more than half of its immense trade with Great Britain since this country adopted a tariff policy six months ago, has been disclosed.

When the national government came into power last fall, Britain was the biggest customer of the United States next to Canada, buying $50,000,000 worth of American goods every month. Today that monthly business has fallen to $21,000,000.

Business men in the United States can blame world conditions for much of their vanished trade. But it is Britain's new tariffs, added by the suspension of the gold standard, which have struck the severest blow.

Combined, these two factors now make the average United States product subject to a virtual duty of 50 per cent. Until recently, when the anti-dumping measures were replaced, the duty was virtually 80 per cent. on some of the chief exports from the United States.

So far the United States has had no grounds for making representations, since there is no evidence yet of discrimination.

Few United States manufacturers have found it worth while to establish branch factories in Britain so as to escape the tariff. The outlay, they say, is too great for the advantages to be derived.

Grains and cotton alone of the bigger United States exports are holding their own.

Cabinet Shuffle In Italy

Five Ministers and Eleven Under-Secretaries Displaced

Rome, Italy.—Dino Grandi, Italian foreign minister has resigned in a far-reaching cabinet shake-up ordered by Premier Mussolini.

Five ministers and 11 under-secretaries were displaced in the shake-up. Mussolini retained for himself two of the vacated portfolios.

These constituted the first changes in the cabinet since September, 1929. The shake up was regarded as another "rotation" to bring new blood into the government without any change of policy.

The five ministers who resigned were Grandi; Alfredo Rocca, minister of justice; Antonio Mosconi, minister of finance; Prof. Balduino Guiliano, minister of education, and Giuseppe Bottai, minister of corporations.

Mussolini, who already was minister of interior as well as premier, kept for himself the ministries of foreign affairs and corporations.

Among the 11 under-secretaries who were displaced were Il Duce's own right-hand man, Francesco Guinza.

Revival Of World Trade

Prince Of Wales Believes Better Times To Come Soon

London, England.—The Prince of Wales said that he believed this year would witness the first move toward the world's return to better times. Speaking at the West African dinner the Prince said he hoped trade recovery was not far distant and added:

"It is my belief that 1932 will witness the beginning of a return to happier and more prosperous times and a great revival of world trade."

Triumph For League

Four Powers Agree In Principle To Limit Artillery

Geneva, Switzerland.—A resolution ending the first phase of the world arms conference was drawn up by the general commission of the conference. Edouard Herriot, French Premier, announced the four powers—Britain, France, United States and Italy—had agreed in principle that land artillery should be limited. Herriot welcomed the text as "a triumph for the League."

Sir Henry Thornton Resigns

Retires As President and Chairman Of Canadian National

Ottawa, Ont.—Resignation of Sir Henry Thornton as president and chairman of the Canadian National Railways has been accepted by the board of directors and the Dominion Government. His resignation is effective August 1.

Coincident with this announcement came a statement that S. J. Haugrøvd would be acting president of the system in charge of operation and construction.

Future plans of Sir Henry have not been disclosed. He issued a statement in Montreal, but gave no intimation of his future plans.

Simultaneous with announcement of Sir Henry's intention to sever his connection with the C.N.R., after a few months less than 10 years service, rumors circulated that United States roads were seeking his services. One report was that a railway of the western states had made Sir Henry an offer, but it was officially said at Montreal that no such offer had been accepted.

Canadian Wheat For East

Vancouver, B.C.—Another cargo of Canadian wheat will leave here soon for the far east. It was stated in grain circles today that four thousand tons, about 135,000 bushels, had been sold in Vladivostok for August delivery through the local firm of Kerr, Clifford and Company. Shipment of the order will be made almost immediately. A few months ago several million bushels of western grain were shipped from here to the Russian port.

Child Dragged To Death

Joliet, Que.—Four-year-old Paul Lamarche was dragged to his death by a cow after his older brother had tied him to the animal's tail, it was revealed at a coroner's inquest here. After securing his brother to the cow's tail, the older Lamarche scared the animal and Paul was instantly killed.

RAMSAY MACDONALD'S CROWNING ACHIEVEMENT

To bring about a successful conclusion to the Lausanne Reparations Conference when all hope of a satisfactory settlement was lost is the great achievement of Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald of Great Britain. Ramsay MacDonald is shown standing between Herr Von Papen, German Chancellor (left), and M. E. Herriot of France (right), whom he brought to London and persuaded to settle their differences. His Majesty the King sent the British Premier a telegram of congratulations following the signing of the accord.

Sends Largest Group

United Kingdom Has Greatest Representation At Conference

Ottawa, Ont.—Delegates, official and technical advisers, personal staff secretaries and unofficial counsellors to the Imperial Conference number 272. Of that number the United Kingdom has the largest proportion, with 78, which is one more than Canada itself.

Great Britain has sent seven delegates, 55 advisers, members of personal staffs, business consultants, unofficial counsellors and secretariat.

Canada's delegation totals 13, with 50 advisers and a secretariat of 14.

The smallest group is from Southern Rhodesia, whose premier, Hon. H. W. Moffatt, heads a party of eight.

The other empire nations distribute their representation as follows:

Australia, two delegates and 20 others; New Zealand, two delegates and 14 others; South Africa, three delegates and 22 others; the Irish Free State, three delegates and 17 others; Newfoundland, two delegates and seven others; India, eight delegates and nine others.

Accommodation for this large number has been found in the House of Commons Building, while a special directory of information has been issued regarding them.

Protecting Grain Ships

Radio Ensures Safety For Vessels

Churchill, Man.—When the first Atlantic ships head into Hudson Straits on their way to Churchill to load grain next month, they will be constantly protected by a series of radio stations located at strategic points throughout the Far North.

The ships will first come in contact with the radio station at Resolution Island, near the eastern entrance of the straits. Then there is Cape Hope Advance, about midway through the straits. Further on is Nottingham Island base, at the west entrance to the channel.

These three stations, plus a fourth at Churchill, are known as direction finding stations. This means that the captains of vessels can communicate with the several stations, during fogs, for instance, and his position may be plotted on charts.

May Last Five Weeks

Cautious Estimate Made For Deliberations Of Imperial Farley

Ottawa, Ont.—Malcolm MacDonald, M.P., son of Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, thinks the deliberations of imperial conference delegates might last "five weeks," which is the cautious estimate of everybody. What emerges from the five weeks remains to be seen; but if the impressiveness of personnel means anything, the results should be thoroughly comprehensive.

With the exception of Newfoundland's Prime Minister, the personnel of the conference is complete. Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin, Lord President of the Council, heads a British delegation in which no less than 78 persons were included. Less imposing are the other national groups.

SUGGESTS PROBE OF EMPIRE WHEAT QUOTA SCHEME

Ottawa, Ont.—The Imperial Economic Conference means more to Canada than its own immediate results, stated Premier J. T. M. Anderson of Saskatchewan, in a talk with the Canadian Press. He sees the gathering as a possible forerunner of a broader conference to solve world economic problems.

"The British Empire is showing the way to the world in the attempt to lead the world out of its troubles," he said. "The Empire Conference can go a long way in improving conditions but further steps must be taken. Besides its own work, however, the conference can lay down a groundwork for extensive later development."

Commenting on the forecasts that an empire wheat quota would not be one of the results of the Ottawa conference, Dr. Anderson said the Saskatchewan Government's position was that the quota plan should be fully investigated. He realized the obstacles in the way of an empire quota—including the fact that Canada exports double the wheat the empire can consume—but he thought a subsequent world conference might bring about more equitable distribution and a strengthening of the price fabric.

Dakota Farmers Hope For Dollar Wheat

Plan To Hold Grain Until Level Is Reached

Toledo, N.D.—Across the prairies of North Dakota, expected to produce one-sixth of the United States' wheat output this year, is heard a chorus: "Hold the grain for $1 a bushel."

If sponsors are successful, the cry will be taken up throughout the United States.

Deil Willis, Toledo farmer, is chairman of the organization which has stirred the farmers in more than 400 North Dakota townships to pledge holding their wheat, effective August 1, unless and until the dollar level is reached.

"This period of low prices finally has brought us to a position where it is either sink or swim," Willis said. "We will hold our wheat."

There is a demand for it at the set price of one dollar per bushel, and then we will sell only 10 per cent. of it one month," Willis continued.

"This will make an orderly marketing system."

He said the plan, launched here less than a week ago, has been enthusiastically received.

The agreed price will be based on Winnipeg quotations. The dollar will be for the best wheat, with discount for lower grades.

Vancouver, B.C.—Customs officers have seized $7,000 worth of opium found concealed in a galley on board the liner "Empress of Japan."

The officers obtained additional scattered contraband valued at $500. Members of the crew reported that some deliveries of narcotics were made off Honolulu, the stuff being tossed overboard to be picked up by fishing boats.

"Yes," he acquiesced slowly. "It is getting late."

A look of concern spread itself over Jean's face.

"I think we ought to get the car out again and go and see if anything has happened," she said decisively. "They may have had a spill. Were they coming by motor?"

"No. Judy drove down to Newton Abbott in the dog-cart, and the Holfords proposed hiring some sort of conveyance from a livery stable."

"Well, I expect they've had a smash of some kind. I'm sure we ought to go and find out! Was Judy driving that excitable chestnut of yours?"

He shook his head.

"No—a perfectly well-conditioned pony, as meek as Moses. We'll give them a quarter of an hour more. If they don't show up by then, I'll run the car out and we'll investigate."

The minutes crawled by on leaden feet. Jean felt restless and uneasy and more than a trifle astonished that Burke should manifest so little anxiety concerning his sister's whereabouts.

Then, just before the quarter of an hour was up, there came the shrill tinkle of a bicycle bell, and a boy cyclied up to the gate and, springing off his machine, advanced up the cobbled path with a telegram in his hand.

Jean's face blanched, and she waited in taut suspense while Burke ripped open the ominous orange-coloured envelope.

"What is it?" she asked nervously. "Have they—has it had news?"

There was a pause before Burke answered. Then, he handed the flimsy sheet to her, remarking shortly: "They're not coming."

Jean's eyes flew along the brief message.

"Returning tomorrow. Am staying the night with Holfords. Judy."

Her face fell.

"How horribly disappointing!" Her glance flittered regretfully to the faint disc of the moon showing like a pallid ghost of itself in a sky still luminous with the afternoon sunlight.

"I shan't see my moonlight Moot to-night after all!" she continued. "I wonder what has happened to make them change their plans?"

Burke volunteered no suggestion but stood staring moodily at the swiftly receding figure of the telegraph boy.

"Well," Jean braced herself to meet the disappointment, "there's nothing for it but for you to run me back home, Geoffrey. We ought to start at once."

"Very well. I'll go and get the car out," he answered. "I suppose it's the only thing to be done."

He moved off in the direction of the garage, Jean walking rather disconsolately beside him.

"I am disappointed!" she declared. "I just hate the sight of a telegraph boy!"

boy! They always spoil things. I rather wonder you get your telegrams delivered at this outlandish spot," she added musingly.

"Oh, of course we have to pay mileage. There's no free delivery to the 'back of beyond'!"

As he spoke, Burke vanished into the semi-dark of the garage, and presently Jean heard sounds suggestive of ineffectual attempts to start the engine, accompanied by a muttered curse or two. A few minutes later Burke reappeared, looking rather hot and dusty and with a black smudge of oil across his cheek.

"You'd better go back to the bungalow," he said gruffly. "There's something gone wrong with the works, and it will take me a few minutes to put matters right."

Jean nodded sympathetically and retreated towards the house, leaving him to tinker with the car's internals.

It was growing chilly—the "cool of the evening" manifests itself early on Dartmoor—and she was not at all sorry to find herself indoors. The wind had dropped, but a curious, still sort of calm seemed to be permeating the atmosphere.

As Jean stood at the window, gazing out half absently, she suddenly swept the wide expanse in front of her.

The valleys between the distant towers were hardly visible. They had become mere basins cupping warm lakes of wraithlike vapour which, even as she watched them creep higher, inch by inch, as though responding to some impulse of a rising tide.

She had lived long enough in Devonshire by this time to know the risks of being caught in a mist on Dartmoor, and she sped out of the room, intending to go to the garage and warn Burke that he must hurry.

He met her on the threshold of the bungalow, and she turned back with him into the room she had just quitted.

"Are you ready?" she asked eagerly. "There's a regular moon mist coming on. The sooner we start the better."

He looked at her oddly. He was rather put and his eyes were curiously bright.

"The car won't budge," he said. "I've been tinkering at her all this time to no purpose."

Jean stared at him, a vague apprehension of disagreeable possibilities presenting itself to her mind. This predicament would be an extremely awkward one if the car remained recalcitrant!

"Won't budge?" she repeated. "But you must make it budge, Geoffrey. We can't see any star here! What's wrong with it?"

Burke launched out into a string of technicalities which left Jean with a confused feeling that the mechanism of a motor must be an invention of the devil designed expressly for the chastening of human nature, but from which she succeeded in gathering the bare skeleton fact that something had gone radically wrong with the car's running powers.

Her apprehensions quickened.

"Make the best of a bad job—and console each other," he suggested lightly.

She frowned a little. It did not seem to her quite the moment for jesting.

"Don't be ridiculous, Geoffrey," she said sharply. "We've got to get back somehow. What can you do?"

"I can't do anything more than I've done here we are and here we've got to stay."

"You know that's impossible," she said, in a quick, low voice.

He looked at her with a sudden devil-may-care glint in his eyes.

"You never can tell before hand what's going to happen," he said. "I know I used to think that heaven on earth was impossible," he said slowly. "I'm not so sure now." He drew a step nearer her. "Would you mind so dreadfully if we had to stay here, little Miss Prunes-and-Prisms?"

Jean stared at him in amazement, in amazement which slowly turned to incredulous horror as a sudden almost unbelievable idea flashed into her mind, kindled into flame by the leaping, half-exultant note in his tones.

"Geoffrey?" Her lips moved stily, and she was not aware of the hoarse, strangled sound and hoarse "Geoffrey, I don't believe there's anything wrong with the car at all. . . . Or there is, you've tampered with it on purpose. . . . You're not being straight with me."

She broke off, her startled gaze searching his face as though she would write the truth from him. Her eyes were very wide and dilated, but the anger that blazed in them lurked fast—startled fear.

For a moment Burke was silent. Then he spoke, with a quiet deliberateness that held something ominous, inexorable, in its very calm.

"You're right," he said slowly. "I've not been straight with you. But I'll be frank with you now. The whole thing—asking you to come up here today, the moonlight expedition for tonight—everything—was all fixed up, planned solely to get you here. The car won't run for the simple reason that I've put it out of action. I wasn't quite sure whether or not you could drive a car, you see!"

"I can't," said Jean. Her voice was quite expressionless.

"No? So much the better, then. But I wasn't going to leave any weak link in the chain by which I hold you."

"By which you hold me?" she repeated dully. She felt stunned, incapable of protest, only able to repeat, parrot-like, the words he had just used.

"Yes. Don't you understand the position? It's clear enough, I should think!" He laughed a little recklessly. "Either you promise to marry me, in which case I'll take you home at once—the car's not damaged beyond repair—or you stay here, here at the bungalow with me, until tomorrow morning."

With a sharp cry she retreated from him, her face as white.

"No—not Not that!" The poignancy of that caught-back cry writhed the words from his lips in hurrying, vehement disclaimer. "You'll be perfectly safe as safe as though you were my sister. I don't look like that."

Jean! Jean! Could you imagine that I would hurt you—you whom I worship—my little white love?" The words rushed out in a torrent, hoarse and shaken and passionately tender.

"Before God, not! You'll be utterly safe. Jean, I don't pretend I'm sweet!" His voice stalled and deepened. "Sacred as the purest love in the whole world could hold you." He was silent a moment; then, as the tension in her face gradually relaxed, he went on: "But the world won't know that!"

The note of tenderness in his voice now swept away by the resurgence of a fierce relentlessness—triumphant, implacable—that meant winning at all on: "But the world won't know that!" he repeated. "After tonight, for your own sake—because a woman's reputation cannot stand the breath of scandal, you'll be compelled to marry me. You'll have no choice."

Jean stood quite still, staring in front of her. Once her lips moved, but no sound came from them. Slowly laboriously almost, she was realizing exactly what had happened, and from which she had just escaped.

Her dream had come true, after all—horribly inconceivably true.

The heavy silence which had fallen seemed suddenly filled with the dream-Burke's voice—mocking and exultant.

"You'll be stamped with the mark of the beast for ever. It's too late to try and run away. . . . It's too late."

CHAPTER XXVII.

Into the Mist

"Then that telegram—that telegram from Judy—I suppose that was all part of the plan?"

Jean felt the thicket of the question even when she asked it. The answer was not so inevitable.

"Yes—briefly. I knew that Judy meant staying the night with her friends before she went away. She sent the wire—because I asked her to."

"Judy did that?"

There was such an immeasurable anguish of—prayer in the low, quick-spoken whisper that Burke felt glad Judith was not there to hear it. Had it been otherwise, she might have regretted the share she had taken in the proceedings, small as it had been.

She was not a man, half-created by love, in whose passion-blurred vision nothing counted save the winning of the one woman, nor had she known Burke's plan in its entirety.

"Yes, Judy sent the wire," he said. "But give her so much credit, she didn't know that I intended—this. She only knew that I wanted another chance of seeing you alone—of asking you to be my wife, and I told her that you wouldn't come up to the bungalow unless you believed she would be there too. I didn't think you'd trust yourself alone with me again—after that afternoon at the inn—with blunt candour."

"No. I shouldn't have done."

"So you see I had to think of something—some way. And it was you yourself who suggested this method."

"I?"—incredulously.

"Yes. Don't you remember what you told me that day I drove you back from Dartmoor?"—"A woman's happiness depends upon her reputation."

She looked at him quickly, recalling the scattered details of that afternoon—Burke's glances at what he believed to be her fear of gossiping tongues and her own answer to his taunt: "No woman can afford to ignore scandal."

And then, following upon that, his sudden absorption in his own thoughts.

The remembrance of it all was like a torchlight flashed into a dark place, illuminating what had been hidden and insecure. She spoke swiftly.

"And it was then—that afternoon—you thought of this?"

He bent his head.

"Yes," he acknowledged.

Jean was silent. It was all clear now—penetratingly so.

"And the Holfords? Are there any such people?" she asked directly.

She scarcely knew what prompted her to put the question so needless and unimportant a question. Actually, she felt no interest at all in the answer. It could not make the least difference to her present circumstances.

Perhaps it was a little the feeling that this trumpety process of questioning and answering served to postpone the inevitable moment when she must face the situation in which she stood herself—face it in its simple crudeness, denuded of unessential yare and wherefore.

"Oh, yes, the Holfords are quite well known here. And so is the plan for an expedition to one of the towers by moonlight. Only it will be carried out tomorrow night instead of tonight. Tonight is for the settlement between you and me."

The strained expression of utter, impetuous sincerity was gradually leaving Jean's face. The unreal was becoming real, and she knew now what she was up against; the hard, reckless quality of Burke's voice left her no illusions.

"Geoffrey," she said quietly, "you won't really do this thing?"

If she had hoped to move him by a simple, straightforward appeal to the best that might be in him, she failed completely. For the moment, all that was good in him, anything chivalrous which the helplessness her womanhood might have invoked, was in readiness. He was more primitive man, who had succeeded in carrying off the woman he meant to mate and was prepared to hold her at all costs.

"I told you I would compel you," he said doggedly. "That I would let nothing in the world stand between you and me. And I meant every word I said. You've no way out now—except marriage with me."

The imperious decision of his tone roused her fighting spirit.

"Do you imagine," she broke out scornfully, "that after this—I would marry you? If I—I wouldn't marry you if it were the last man on earth! I'd die sooner!"

"I dare say you will!" he returned composedly. "You've too much grit to be afraid of death. Only you see, that doesn't happen to be the alternative. The alternative is a smirched reputation. That's what you'll have—after tonight—even if you marry me; dragged up—"

"YEARS CAN BRING YOU ADDED CHARM!"

SAYS JACK HOLT

"Some women seem to grow more alluring every year," says Jack Holt. "Birthdays only add to their charm."

"Here in Hollywood you see them every day—actresses still every bit as youthful as they were years ago, more poised, more irresistible than ever. Still the idols of an adoring public!"

"No matter what her age, a woman who has the fresh, glowing charm of youth is always attractive."

"I should think that every woman would learn the complexion secret the screen and stage stars know!"

"You will want to know how the lovely stars keep youthful charm right through the years! 'Guard count' (555) is the key we do, they will tell you, 'with Lux Toilet Soap'."

Important actresses the world over—in Hollywood, Broadway—in Europe—depend on this fragrant, amazingly white soap for every type of skin. The carers of dollar-a-cake French soap for 10c.

terly into the mire if you refuse. I'm putting it before you with brutal frankness. I know, because I want you to realize just what it means and to promise that you'll be my wife before it's too late—while I can still get you back to Staple during the hours of propriety—smiling grimly.

She looked at him with a slow, measured glance of bitter contempt.

"Even a tarnished reputation might be preferable to marriage with you—more endurable," she added, with the sudden tortuous impulse of a trapped thing to hurt back.

"You don't really believe that!" —impetuously. "I know I know I could make you happy! You'd be the one man in the world to me. And I don't think—more quietly—"that you could endure a slurred name, Jean."

She made no answer. Her very word he spoke only made it more clear to her that she was caught—bound hand and foot in a web from which there was no escape. Yet, little as Burke guessed it, the actual question of "what people might say" did not trouble her to any great extent. She was too much absorbed in her own daughter to permit a mere matter of reputation to force her into a distasteful marriage.

Not that she minimized the value of good repute. She was perfectly aware that if she refused to marry Burke, and he carried out his threat of detaining her at the bungalow until the following morning, she would have a heavy penalty to pay—the utmost penalty which a suspicious world exacts from a woman, even though she may be essentially innocent, in whose past there lurks a questionable episode.

Now I am making it a rule to always keep a bottle of it in my medicine chest."

Golf Gossip.

The Knockout Tournament sponsored by Stony Plain Golf club developed into a long-drawn out affair. Spruce Grove News.

Mr and Mrs L L Piercey and family are enjoying a short vacation at Edmonton Beach.

Mr Harry Brox left Tuesday to accept the foremanship of a C. P. construction gang near Lacombe.

Miss E. Miske, youngest daughter of Mr and Mrs G Miske, was united in marriage to Mr Geo Frank, eldest son of Mr and Mrs J Frank, Tues. July 26. The ceremony took place at St Matthew's church, by Rev E Eberhardt. The many guests and friends were entertained, after the ceremony, at the home of the bride's parents.

Mr Wilmar Sutherland will leave today for Vancouver, to spend part of his vacation with relatives.

A few of the Spruce Grove sports "played the ponies" at the Edmonton Ex last week, but failed to "bring home the bacon" in the shape of $3 &c.

Miss L Curtis is once again on the staff of the Grove cafe, and is placing the advertising requirements in first-class order.

Miss McKinlay is spending a few days holiday with Mrs Wm McLeod.

Capt. E. R. Gibson is at present in Banff, where he is taking a party of distinguished visitors thru the mountains.

The Grove's ball team were to have played Knox team at Winterburn Sunday Evg, but there were no cars for the players.

Practically all the baseball fans were to the City Sunday, to witness the Royals beat the Arctics. Herman Leeblich pitched for the Royals, and also has a run to his credit. After the big grand stand play of the Royals on Sunday, the results of Tuesday Evg's game came as quite a shock to the local backers of the Royals.

For the first time in several years no competitors from the Grove this year entered the Edmonton Ex's Horse-show competitions. The local pitchers were pleased to note that Jack Salz and R Reid from Clymont made such a good showing at the competition by winning the Ferguson Challenge Trophy.

Here and There

Four guests at the French River Chalet Bungalow Camp recently brought in four muskies totalling 72 pounds of weight. The largest weighed 26 lbs. and the smallest twelve. Fishing at this popular resort is most successful this season, and there will be keen competition for the Canadian Pacific trophy.

Native Sons of Glasgow enroute to the Big Convention of their Association at the Scottish city have been travelling across Canada via Canadian Pacific Railway from Victoria and points in Western Canada, Ontario and Quebec, for the sailing of the "Duchess of Bedford". Members will gather from all over the world for a monster celebration July 16-21.

John Pindlay, who is by way of being the all time big game hunter of the world, arrived at Vancouver recently aboard the "Empress of Russia", enroute to England "for a little rest." He adds to his list of game hunting the disciplining of Malay head-hunters, who disregard the white man's law. "One raid we made," said Mr. Pindlay, "left a trail of twenty dead men."

Canadian Pacific low rate bargain return trips, which have been a very successful feature of the company's operation this year, will include one to the Maritime Provinces July 22, when Nova Scotia and New Brunswick will be covered in round trips to take in most of the show places of the two provinces. The trip will be made by a new passenger in the fast new steamship "Princess Helene" across the Bay of Fundy to the Land of Bransell.

A hole-in-one, though rare, is not unique, but when it is made by a lady and for the first time on the course it rates a headline. This was done by Miss Guy LaPrairie on the 150-yard par three hole at the Canadian Pacific Recreation Club Course at Sorin near Montreal recently.

Favorable development of this year's crop on the prairie provinces is noted by the Canadian Pacific Railway's weekly report issued recently by the Agricultural Department in Winnipeg. Most of the wheat in Manitoba and Eastern Saskatchewan is headed at an average height of two feet, and elsewhere ranges between advanced shot blade to headed stage. Fall loss has been only local and in scattered districts.

Bob Davis, roving columnist of the New York Sun, and probably the most travelled newspaperman in the world, has been staying at the Banff Springs Hotel on his way back from Hawaii, accompanied by Mrs. Davis. Mr. Davis has a flair for the unusual, and will likely unearth a wealth of good material for his column among the old timers of the Rockies.

Taxation comparisons in connection with motor vehicles and railroads should take into consideration that the railways pay for their motor cars, and also to some extent for the roadway used by their motor vehicle competitors, says the "Traffic World." This brings in the question of how much the motor vehicles should pay for the highways and whether they are doing it. (354)
